

Aldiner Laurent

SINGER | SONG WRITER | BLOGGER

Aldiner Laurent, a singer, songwriter, and blogger, made her debut in the world of music at the tender age of three. On a Sunday at church, she fearlessly belted out the hymn "Jesus Loves Me," even though she could barely form complete sentences. Her unwavering confidence and sincere belief in every word she sang foreshadowed her destined path to grace stages, using her angelic voice to share her devotion to Jesus.

Born and raised on the picturesque Caribbean Island of Saint Martin, Aldiner's love for God and music blossomed. As soon as she learned to read, she eagerly delved into piano lessons, which kindled her passion for composing and arranging. With the guidance of talented musicians and instructors from a young age, and being part of a musically inclined family, she developed an unyielding passion and a distinctive, no-nonsense approach to music.

At the age of 17, Aldiner left her island home and embarked on a journey to the Netherlands for higher education. It was there that she kickstarted her professional music career, all while attending university. Throughout Europe, the U.K., and America, she toured extensively as a background singer. Additionally, she worked as a vocal coach, arranger, songwriter, and trainer for choirs and worship teams.

Blessed with captivating vocals and a unique sound, Aldiner's musical inspiration stems from her deep intimacy with God. Her songs encapsulate personal encounters and intimate moments with the divine. Having honed her skills as a seasoned praise and worship leader, she draws influence from various genres, including CCM, Black Gospel, Contemporary Gospel, and Afro-Caribbean music.

Aldiner's favorite quote perfectly encapsulates her perspective on her craft: "I am God's project—a work in progress. Everything I do transcends myself. If my heart is aligned, the music follows suit. My only desire is for people to hear God's heart resonating through mine and come to know the same God I do." Whether through her music, her character, her lifestyle, or her inspirational words, Aldiner endeavors to reflect God's nature and character in every aspect of her life. Driven by her love for God and humanity, she aspires to inspire others to boldly embrace their God-given identities, exploring their gifts, talents, and skills to illuminate the world and bring glory to God.
